Chapter 1 by Neeharika Jaiswal

At the pizza place, I watch him, eyes gleaming, staring into his laptop screen.

I am in love with a stranger.

Chapter 2 by Keurlock

Love at first sight. The thing is, he wasn't even the most handsome guy I've seen.

Perhaps, there was something special.

...Nah. No such thing. I don't believe in magic. Or anything like that.

This guy was like any other person, working on his computer. Maybe it was his captivating eyes.

The way his blue gleaming eyes shined.

It was like the glowing moon in the dark night.

My body seemed to move on it's own.

Before I knew it, I had approached him.

"H-Hey" I said smiling awkwardly. He looked at me in the eye. My face flushed red. "Hi" he answered gently "Do you need anything?"

"Oh no. Am I bothering??" I thought to myself "I really don't have anything...Think of some random excuse! Waiton!"

I thought I wanted to say something

I took a peek at his screen. "Oh! You write stories and poems!" I smiled and went up a little too close to him. "Oh! Uh, uh, ya.." he said flushing red. It looked cute. "Hey, are you an aspiring writer? I love to read books, and I actually illustrate!"

We spoke all that night, we ended up parting ways at 10pm. The storekeeper had to force us out, hehe. We ended up having lots of things to talk about. It was such a magical night for me. I felt like we've known each other for so long.

I felt like I could tell him anything.

So I did.

But he rejected.

Why?

Because he was transgender. He was gay.

We didn't talk much after that. Again, I was in love with a stranger.
